Exported from an unofficial mirror of a public mailing list. Copyright in each message remains with the person who wrote it. Email addresses are obscured as `user at host`, the form the original archive published. This file was rebuilt from parsed fields rather than retained headers, so it is faithful in content but not byte-exact.

Argh. I now have an electronic copy of the paper my friend wrote (which is interesting, although not exactly what I'd understood him to say it was--for instance, the St. Peter connections are not really played up, it's a lot more generic than that). But I've lost the list I had saved of who wanted a copy. So email me again off-list and I'll send you the document as an attachment (I'm assuming MS-Word is fine with people? That's the form I have it in right now...)
