They're everywhere! They're everywhere!

The latest issue of The New York Review of Science Fiction (no. 125, Jan 1999) kicks off notably with a front page article by our brilliant forward scout Michael Andre-Driussi, digging into Jack Vance's neglected THE BLUE WORLD. Alga's PLAYBOY BOOK OF SCIENCE FICTION is reviewed. (I've even got a small review of my own there toward the back.)

May I recommend that people with a few spare bucks s*bscr*b* to this worthy 24-page monthly treat, either from their web site (sorry, I've misplaced the URL but altavista will tell ya), or by sending $US32 for Americans or $US45.00 for overseas' readers, for a year's sub, to PO Box 78, Pleasantville, NY, 10570, USA? (I do hope I'm not offending against list policy in making this suggestion - I have nothing to gain by doing so, he said piously.)

Yay! (Go NYRSF! If everybody around here can't [find the time or energy to] write for it, they should at least subscribe.)

Doh! (I was hoping to surprise alga--sent a copy of 125 which just happened to have that review.)

LOL! (Damien Broderick, funny guy, has a sharp review in 125!)

(And one of these days we're going to have a big talk about THE BLACK GRAIL, which I've just been reading. What you knew, Damien, and when you knew it . . .)
