Just finished reading Paul J. McAuley's second Confluence book, Ancients of Days, and contrary to the faint praise of a previous posting of mine, I think that the series is living up to the expectations created (for me) by the related short story Recording Angel in Greg Bear's New Legends (to which I am also indebted for introducing me to Greg Egan).

Anyway, I'd be interested to hear comments from other Urthlings about the series.

Vizcacha, regarding the related-authors list from Amazon,

"Customers who bought titles by Gene Wolfe also bought titles by these authors:

Frederick Forsyth
John Le Carre
Daniel Silva
Joseph Kanon
William Safire"<<

I recently saw the following on Amazon (after another despairing, craven visit to the "On Blue's Waters" section):

"Customers who bought titles by Gene Wolfe also bought titles by these authors:

Dan Simmons
Michael Swanwick
Patricia A. McKillip
Alfred Bester
Theodore Sturgeon "

which would seem to be slightly more on the mark.
