The idea of a generation ship built inside a hollow rock, run by a supercomputer which interacts with the inhabitants in the manner of a deity through a religion and priesthood, is completely original to Wolfe, right?

Every bit as orginial as the idea of an orphan of unknown parentage, raised by a secret society, who on coming of age is given an extraordinary sword, undertakes a quest, finds that great powers have destined him for greatness, overcomes an evil enemy, and takes his place as king.

Maybe Wolfe stole that one from Star Trek too!
