Between the time when Delany planned the diptych and wrote Stars... and it was published then getting on with the second the AIDS issue hit and Delany said that his world was so changed by it that he could no longer write the second - poor memory might not serve but I think it was to be entitled "The Splendour of Cities and their Dying" or something very similar.

The Splendor and Misery of Bodies, of Cities

Since there has been rumour that he started working on it again, but only rumour: I've heard nothing that could be taken as reputable news.

I have heard that rumour as well -- from sufficiently reputable sources that I believe it quite possibly true, but couched in such terms that excessive optimism would be unwise.
