Exported from an unofficial mirror of a public mailing list. Copyright in each message remains with the person who wrote it. Email addresses are obscured as `user at host`, the form the original archive published. This file was rebuilt from parsed fields rather than retained headers, so it is faithful in content but not byte-exact.

If I got everything working right, the mailing list archives on the web site are now updated daily. There'll be a new volume each month, and I may forget to manually update the navigation links, so don't be shy about reminding me around the first week of each month.

What I would like, and others too, is for the digest to work the way it used to, not as separate attachments but as one simple email. Roy C. Lackey taught me how to make reading it much easier, however, and I will pass this arcane skill along (as I'm sure he will) to anyone who uses Outlook Express. Still, it's a nuisance. And of course I haven't a clue as to how non-OE users can cope.
