Disclave is a "bookish" convention in Washington D.C. May1-3. Gene Wolfe is Guest of Honor. I have been asked if I want to participate on a panel (this was suggested by the other GoH, Terry Bisson, a good friend of mine who knows about our group).

Well, I'm not much of a convention person, and usually I just do an editors panel on the rare occasions when I attend---but this time I wondered if any of you guys would be interested in coming, and if maybe we could put together a panel from the group. I'm sure they'd be interested. If you*are*, maybe it would be best to email me. Also email ideas on how to organize it, as I'm kind of a neophyte.

I'm sure most of you know that Wolfe is also GoH at the World Fantasy Convention in Baltimore at Halloween, and maybe you were planning to go to that instead if only one trip east is in the crystal ball. If we can't get it together for D.C., maybe we could do that one. But the advantage here is that I've actually been asked! Also, it will be much smaller, I would think, which could be a plus in terms of big fish, little fish. Or not.
