Thematically, anyway, Agia is Enemy. Compare Satan in the Garden. Satan is a fallen heavenly being. That doesn't mean Agia is a cacogen; she may be a human from space. But thematically, it makes sense for her to have fallen from heaven.

Is she Hethor's paracoita? Wait! Yes, I know what you're thinking. BUT. He is delusional. Given his disordered mind, it wouldn't necessarily mean that Agia was artificial.

I don't remember enough of his ramblings to disprove or support this. Somebody with a fresher memory? I've always found the deep alliance between Agia and Hethor to be a little incredible.

Hethor lost his paracoita, potentially one cause of his mental disorder. It seemed to me that Agia was a substitute, possibly an inferior one as far as he was concerned.
