I've just taken delivery of Jeffrey Ford's collection "The Fantasy Writer's Assistant and other stoies", and the stories look quite Wolfe-like. (This is only a first impression; I look forward to reading some tonight).

One of the few residual pleasures from my sentence (objectively short/subjectively long) as a small press magazine editor/co-owner was granted to me just a few weeks ago when I took up that book and turned to the page where original publication venues are noted. There I saw the name of my wretched little magazine, "Aberrations." Touching.

I was somewhat surprised that Jeffrey Ford did not include at least one of the others I bought from him and published -- collectors take note! I'm thinking of "The White Man."
