Exported from an unofficial mirror of a public mailing list. Copyright in each message remains with the person who wrote it. Email addresses are obscured as `user at host`, the form the original archive published. This file was rebuilt from parsed fields rather than retained headers, so it is faithful in content but not byte-exact.

New topic: resources for Bibliophiles like us.

I got this program called Library; I use OS X but think it is available in other formats. Anyway, I'm cataloguing my books; it auto-searches for the ISBNs you list (or scan) and downloads basic info from servers, including pics of the books.

The program then has a button which autogenerates HTML pages so you can nearly instantly post them. I've put up a sample at <http://members.cox.net/sikozujohnson/index.html>; you can specify numbers of books listed on each page and it is amazingly fast to do.

Anyway, if you are interested there's a link to the program at the bottom of the page: it's shareware and costs $10 to register, but the trial program can be downloaded for free for evaluation and enjoyment. Yay modern licenses.

The company also has other neat programs for bibliophiles, like Fontage etc., listed on their homepage and at least the font one is pretty useful.

I should note that my actual homepage's real address has changed and is now <http://members.cox.net/sikozujohnson/index.shtml>, not that it is of interest.
