In regards to the difference between the simulators, I sort of just chalked that conversation up to SF conventions; I pretty much knew the answer before Mr. Million provided it. However, dumb me, now that I think about it, nothing's ever that simple with Wolfe, is it? Interesting train of thought, there; could it be that #5 and father are bound simulators? In addition to clones? Cyborg clone/simulators? Maybe the experiments #5's father performed on him involved installing a bound personality, hence the periods of increasing amnesia?

Also, did anyone notice the similarity between the description of the ghoul-bear and the alzabo? I'm trying to remember if the alzabo had man-like eyes or beast-like eyes; my friend has my copy of the New Sun books. But I also seem to remember the alzabo digging up corpses and eating them.-- ~Josh
