I was 'turned on' to Vonnegut in the early '70s when I was still in high school -- I absorbed a number of his books like they were oxygen. And Player Piano was part of the AP curriculum. I remember most fondly the God Bless You, Mr. R, Cat's Cradle period the best. In later years I thought he'd become a terrible bore, esp. about the Dresden bombing. He's entitled to his opinion, having lived through it, but I don't think it was emblematic of the Allies aims during that incredible apocalyptic holocaust.

I'm still digesting the news to offer any cogent comments. There has been some discussion of his passing in the Patrick O'Brian mail group to which I belong.

Greetings:

I've enjoyed several of Kurt V's works--Player Piano, SL-5--but at some point became highly unenchanted. So it goes.
