Okay, there seems to be a consensus on Sir John as Palaemon. Can we then give Malrubius to Sir Alec and Old Valeria to Dame Maggie? And is Sir Ralph still with us?--he could be memorable as the somewhat slimy Gurloes. And Sir Derek IS the Autarch--I could kick myself for overlooking him even as a momentary lapse.

But fie on the foul felon who proposed Nicholas Cage as Silk. That's a terrible idea. Everybody loves Silk. Does everybody love Nick Cage? Does anybody love Nick Cage? I'm sure O'Leary will back me up when I put myself 100% behind Leo, Leo, Leo.

Alas not, so he'd better be Malrubius :-)

That reminds me, I missed out two from my anti-list

Malrubius: Leslie Nielsen

Triskele: ALF

Well, more sort of `knightly' rather than `aristocratic'. If Larry were still around, he could do a cameo of the Pancreator, say. Maybe you could hire a stately home for the House Absolute. Chatsworth would do.

It is, isn't it? Mind you, Sissy Spacek as Dorcas was a bit off, too :-) Mucor, I grant you.

As for the Hitchhiker's Guide - but that's a Long Sun idea, and a very silly one too. I shall post it to Whorl instead. It's been rather quiet lately.
