Here's a treat:

Click on the website to view the shared world critters.

Click on a critter in the poster to view it's stats.

At the deepest subterranean depths, you find the Lithosphere Whale (geneus wolfeus). Then you can donate to the Shared Worlds sci-fi teen writers summer camp, at which Wolfe will be participating.

Thanks James, that brightened my day.

Note that borboros is Greek for "dung, mire."

King James, meet Herman Melville ...

Gene is participating in our fundraising efforts only, not the summer camp itself. But isn't that a cool idea....

Absolutely. Let's send Gene to summer camp!

yeah, I was really pumped at the idea that all these great writers would be making even casual appearances at the camp. Gene in short pants doing camp projects is an idea I shall continue to relish despite the facts.
