"Like Misfortune, remarkable gifts are not bestowed according to merit. But sometimes the piano does land on just the right person. And so it happens in this case that the person with an historically exceptional insight and ability is just the sort of person you wanted him to be."

Very nice article, James - well written and, in my opinion, a very good description of everything that makes Gene a unique artist. 50-100 is super short ... you have to be a Hemingway to fit the ample praise in that meager count.
