How sure are we that Obama was born on Urth? Where is his birth certificate proving he was native-born in Ascias as required by the Constitution? Perhaps he's really from the Commonwealth, or worse, an illegal alien - a cacogen!

I have clear evidence that he's not from Sainte Croix at all, but originates from Sainte Anne. Just look at his reliance on teleprompters!

I have always wondered about the ribbons above Agilus' ears, though. And Borski's explanation doesn't satisfy.

Borski is hit and miss- imaginative but often way too tenuous and nontextual in his leaps.

Believe it or not I wait for the text to at least legitimately hint at something before I pursue it.

I agree about Borski. However, when reading his work, I do get excited about re-reading Wolfe so I can make some new discovery. I also enjoyed some of his observations on T5HoC and Peace. Alas... BTW, congrats on the Wolfe antho. Long-time lurker on the list, so I am familiar with most of the regulars.

Definitely, his work on Fifth Head is top notch. I am trying to remember if he did much with all the crazy colors associated with names in Peace (blue ribbon around a little coffin, etc) since the characters seemed to be overwhelmingly associated with colors- peacock blue, olive, black, porter is specifically a darker brown beer (which color is bold? Yellow?)- but the ubiquity of color might make it a symbolist's nightmare in the small stories.

Thank you, by the way, for the congratulations. If not worthy, I hope at least that you will enjoy it a bit.

Well, you deserve a congrats, I think. I look forward to reading your contribution. As far as Borski discussing Peace, he did talk about the colors, but in reference to alchemy. A very creative view, IMO.
