If so, can you point him towards this new anthology, open for submissions:

I think he'd be a natural fit if he has an idea (and the time). Many thanks!

Along similar lines, I wish to write to Mr Wolfe in order to express my gratitude as well as to share a couple of (short) things I've written in tribute to him. I was thinking of physically mailing to him by way of the Virginia Kidd Agency.

-- Is this the best way to go about it and, as I've never done something like this before, is there anything I should know further about how to address or package it?

I would not give out his email or address, but there are two public ways you should be able to contact him- either through tor books or his public facebook page, which shouldn't be too difficult to find.
