I just went through that whole huge write up looking for typos, but where did the "g" go in my title? Oh well.

Interestingly enough "Silhouette", published the same year, has this quote"...Pleasureworld. That was the first leisure satellite, and because they didn't know what to do with that kind of thing then, they made soil of the guests' excretions and garbage, and planted trees. Without gravity they grew like a tangle of yarn, of course, like ours in the hydroponic module"

So the strange trees Cutthroat explains might be showing some of this low gravity effect which was obviously on Wolfe's mind at about that time.
