A "Care Facility" generally means some form of facility with around the clock nursing care. This could be a rehab hospital, assisted living facility, residential care facility, continuing care facility, or nursing home. If someone isn't fully well when discharged from the hospital and does not necessarily have the resources take care of themselves or their illness, it is generally recommended they be sent to a care facility.

My family went through this back in May, with my father-in-law. He contracted pneumonia in early May, and after being discharged, was sent to a nursing home for rehab and evaluation.

FYI. What do you suppose a Care Facility is?

If I were still in Illinois I would volunteer to go to Peoria and help out in some way -- wash dishes or cook or do laundry or walk the dog or something -- though I can imagine a thousand ways in which such assistance however well-meant would quickly become misguided and awkward.

Marc, I'm looking forward to reading thoroughly your three-volume exegesis. I have returned repeatedly to the only volume I have seen so far, which is the first.

Eric
