Now, Endymion, I can't just sit by and hear Oreb's unassisted intellect maligned. For example, "Not cut!" is often interpretable as a general moral advisory, though perhaps he's picked up a bit of outsider influence. And of course the LS scene where Oreb begins learning "God's ways!" from Silk (and expresses his very personal ideas about the subject) is convincing that the bird is much brighter than his plumage, but speech impaired. Obvious ranting, but I love Oreb too=)

Now Babbie still puzzles me. Oh heck, the whole SS to date gives me fits now and again. But "screadhbhuidhe," wow, thank you Robert Borski. Really feels sorta "Annese" too.
