Exported from an unofficial mirror of a public mailing list. Copyright in each message remains with the person who wrote it. Email addresses are obscured as `user at host`, the form the original archive published. This file was rebuilt from parsed fields rather than retained headers, so it is faithful in content but not byte-exact.

Please discuss on the lists and/or send me your opinions:

- * Is it really necessary to have two lists, or would one be more comfortable?
- * Would you be offended or annoyed by advertising inserted into every message?
- * Is the ability to search the message archive for keywords useful to you?

Any other advice or suggestions would be welcomed.

I would be happy with one list.

I ignore advertising in emails from other mailing lists. It wouldn't bother me.

I search now with the web browser find function. I find it adequate but more advanced search capabilities would be ok too.

Folks,

Here's my small contribution to the future form of the Urth and Whorl lists.

Personally I prefer two, as I find that it makes threads easier to follow, but it's not a big issue; I could deal with one big list, if that's what others prefer.

* Would you be offended or

I'd rather not have advertising if it can be avoided, but I'd much rather have advertising than no list at all. I imagine it won't be too difficult to ignore ads.

* Is the ability to search the

Oh yes indeed.

would be welcomed.

Well, this isn't advice or a suggestion, but I'm very grateful to you for running this list for us, and for keeping it up even in the face of danger and disaster. Thank you.
