mantis say:

Yikes, all these last minute dashers! Shall we officially start up the next list of questions, in order of questions received after alga? With preference given to those who haven't asked a question yet? (And plenty of time for peer pressure to make 'em change the words/essence into questions that we, the Committee, can agree upon? <g>)

Before I was thinking that questioners might want to see the answers to the first questions before posing the second. But it is true that they can still change/modify their questions in light of the response before we fire off the especially trained courier snail.<<

I'd say that we should definitely wait until we've heard from Wolfe on the first barrage of questions. Who knows what he'll say that will either be so oblique that we need to ask around it again, or what revelation might throw us on our collective ear.

Also, we should see what is said on the on-line interview.

After that, It's a good idea to give priority to those who didn't get a question in for the first round. This kills me say, because I REALLY want to ask the Pas-Typhon question. I'll just have to bide my time...

BTW, mantis, could you post the fifteen questions that made it into the hopper?
