SF WEEKLY has just published John Clute's review of IN GREEN'S JUNGLES, and (among other remarks of interest) Clute declares that it is "reasonably clear" that Horn/Silk is himself an inhumu. Any reactions?

SF WEEKLY has just published John Clute's review of IN GREEN'S JUNGLES, and (among other remarks of interest)

Clute declares that it is "reasonably clear" that Horn/Silk is himself an inhumu. Any reactions?

delurking - well, I have been wondering about that. Horn goes on and on to Hide about how to detect Inhumu - make-up, scales, lack of eating. And near to this point, Horn repeatedly talks about his lack of eating. Also, perhaps the "suicide" scene with who we presume to be Silk is actually a scene with an Inhumu who has fed on Silk (blood everywhere) and has part of Silk's essence, and Horn is transported into the Silk/Inhumu body.

But no one ever comments on Horn's appearance (wrt the other warning signs of an inhumu). I also cannot remember temperature conversations - that would be another telling point.
